³ ADHD assessments are either standalone assessments or can be added to other assessments (Autism or Cognitive).

All assessments include a Parent/Caregiver meeting, and will also assess other mental health conditions (e.g., Anxiety, Depression, and Stress). Information will be collected from the parent/caregivers, as well as participant (no matter what age). If you have any concerns not listed, please talk to the psychologist completing your assessment.

Psychology Assessment Information

Autism Advisory and Support Service (AASS) offers psychological assessment to provide detailed information for autism diagnoses, cognitive and intellectual functioning, developmental difficulties, and other mental health conditions. These assessments will determine the necessary interventions, strategies and supports that will assist someone to reach their potential, as well as identify their strengths, talents, and interests.

Psychological assessments are conducted by a trained Psychologist, and will be provided on an individual basis. Autism diagnostic assessments can be conducted, and then will need to be validated by a Paediatrician or Psychiatrist.
